FIRE HEATED BRANDERS

Fire Heated Branding Irons are made of rust resistant non-corrosive copper alloy and have a 1/4" flat face. They produce a good clear brand because the unit is vented at intersecting points to prevent blotching. They are also equipped with a heavy-duty, one-half inch steel handle, thirty-two inches long. As copper alloy has a lower melting point than steel, caution should be used when heating these irons. Particular caution should be used when using propane branding iron heaters. These branders will not turn ash grey as steel irons, but will retain their natural dull copper color when hot.
